SIUE looking toward future

Chancellor delivers "State of the University" address filled with optimism for the campus

BY DANIELLE BELTON
EDITOR IN CHIEF

SIUE Chancellor David Werner's "State of the University Address" Wednesday focused on the many increases and accomplishments at the university as well as SIUE's future.

Enrollment has made strides with the increased number of students living on campus and a record class of new freshmen. Werner said that enrollment is on an upward trend with a 12 percent increase over last year.

He gave credit to the recruitment staff and the new developments in housing for the increases in enrollment. According to Werner, there are now 2,288 students living on campus. Werner said there is now "remarkable balance between residential and commuter students.

"Full-time students are up 7 percent," Werner said. "Students are focusing more on school and less on other pursuits."

Werner said that although the numbers in each freshman class have been steadily increasing, there is still room for transfer students.

"Transfer students are and will continue to be a very important part of our student body," Werner said.

Werner said that SIUE's revenue increase coincides with the strong Illinois and U.S. economies.

State appropriations make up 45.7 percent of the budget, totaling $60.6 million. Tuition, student fees and housing income total $44.9 million and make up 33.9 percent of the budget. Also, SIUE received funds for salaries, for the library, off-campus nursing facilities and other activities on campus.

The healthy budget will allow the continuation of the growth and development plans for this campus, Werner said.

Address goes over well with faculty, staff

BY DANIELLE BELTON
EDITOR IN CHIEF

Reactions were favorable to SIUE Chancellor David Werner's "State of the University" address Wednesday.

More than 300 people attended the speech. And, members of the audience said Werner's address was well prepared and well organized.

The speech, which gave an overall sense of well-being about the university, caused members of the audience to smile and applaud often.

"Overall, this campus is strong," said Special Service Academic Advisor Danita Mumphard. "I like the way its growing."

Mumphard said she was impressed by the way the university has come up with new ideas to help accommodate the growth.

Lela M. DeTroye and Dianne Koehnecke of the SIUE School of Education also had favorable things to say about the chancellor's speech.

"I was especially encouraged about the movement toward more doctoral programs," said DeTroye, chair of curriculum and instruction.

Freshman numbers up; black enrollment down

Boom continues for fifth straight year

BY TAMARA KANO
NEWS STRINGER

Over the past five years, Southern Illinois University Edwardsville has reported a continuous overall increase in academic enrollment. The figures are collected every year after the second week of classes.

One of the categories in which enrollment has grown significantly since 1994 was in total headcount. In 1994 SIUE had 10,945 students, compared to this year's total of 11,520. Some other areas that presented a meaningful increase are students enrolled full-time, the size of the incoming freshman class, and the number of new freshmen enrolled. An increase of 514 students resulted in a full-time enrollment figures of 7,848 — a 7 percent rise over last year. The number of freshmen at SIUE has grown from 1,911 for the 1994-1995 academic year to 2,059 for the 1998-1999 academic year, and the number of new freshmen went from 1,019 to 1,415 during the same period.

According to Provost David Sill, SIUE has been working very hard to improve the quality of its programs.

"We have been hiring new teachers, specifically for general education courses, which freshmen sign up for," Sill said.

Sill believes that another reason for the increase of incoming freshmen is the completion of Prairie Hall, the university's second residence hall.

Decline in black numbers is a mystery

BY SETH TREPTOW
NEWS STRINGER

The number of black undergraduate students enrolled at SIUE has decreased from 1,408 in 1993 to 1,088 in 1997, and nobody really knows why.

To add to the mystery, the number and percentage of black students receiving degrees has increased and for the fifth consecutive year overall undergraduate enrollment has increased from 8,610 to 8,707 between 1996 and 1997.

Liz Tarpey, assistant to the provost and author of SIU's 1998 Annual Report on Minorities, Women, and Disabled Students, Faculty, and Staff Participation, said that the number of black first-time freshmen has remained approximately the same over the last five years at approximately 200.

In 1993, blacks represented 16 percent of the undergraduate student body. In 1997, that number had dropped to 12 percent. Possible explanations for this four point drop include increased graduation rates, first-time freshmen and transfer student enrollment, financial aid resources and population density.

"We looked at whether or not there has been a shift in the population density within our region, but there hasn't been, so that's been maintained at a fairly stable rate over the last five years," Tarpey said.

DeTroye said she likes the increase in residential students and said she feels very encouraged about the possibility of more doctoral programs.

Koehnecke agreed with DeTroye about the programs and said, "I absolutely love the idea about the new residence hall.

"Making this a campus instead of just a commuter school is very important," Koehnecke said.

She mentioned that although Werner announced that the student to faculty ratio was low at 14.9, in the education department the classes are often filled with as many as 30 students per teacher. As an assistant professor who teaches children's literature, Koehnecke said she'd like to see a significant drop in class size.

Mumphard also worried about the chancellor's comment on the possibility of SIUE raising its academic standards.

"If there are stricter policies, it could cut back on diversity," Mumphard said.

Mumphard mentioned that Special Services often works with students who need the tutoring that her department provides. With higher standards, Mumphard fears these same students might have a harder time getting accepted to SIUE.

Barbara Havis, an assistant professor of curriculum in the School of Education, said she believes the university still has "a lot of work to do." Although Havis admitted the university has shown significant progress, she said there is still work to be done to get SIUE to the next level.

more housing is attracting many new students," Sill said.

In addition to freshmen enrollment, gains were made in graduate students' registration. Graduate enrollment on the campus increased from 1,772 students in 1994 to 1,897 in 1998, although this increase has

"We don't want to take a back seat to any other university," Havis said. "We do a creditable job."

Havis was also impressed by the chance of SIUE increasing its degree and doctoral programs. She hopes the improvements will help SIUE to maintain an identity separate from its sister school at Carbondale. Havis said people often confuse the schools. She said she wants SIUE to get credit for its programs.

Havis and Koehnecke also commented on how many students missed the address. Havis felt that classes should have been canceled for an event of this importance. Havis said she felt many students and faculty missed out.

"If you don't play it up well enough, students won't come," Havis said.

SIUE Chancellor David Warner, said in a recent press release that he believes there are a number of factors contributing to SIUE's enrollment success, including its academic reputation as well as the quality of on-campus student life.

considerably," Werner said.

Citing the new Engineering Building, Werner went on to speak of his commitment to rehabbing the East St. Louis Center, promising a new building for the site by 2001. He said that we need "a facility equal in quality in East St. Louis."

In other building developments, Werner said the growth is positive and that there are plans for a third residence hall to be built by 2001.

On the downside, Werner indicated enrollment of minority students is down, with the number of black students receiving degrees dropping from 13 percent to 11 percent. SIUE's number of black students has dropped as well. Werner said the university is committed to "making this campus open for all," adding, "We must continue our journey down the pathway of harmony."

Werner noted that SIUE loses 30 percent of its freshmen after their first year, much like any university. Werner said that if the current trend continues, SIUE will lose 425 of the freshmen by the end of next semester.

SIUE workers protest before Werner speech

BY DANIELLE BELTON
EDITOR IN CHIEF

SIUE civil service workers held an informational picket in front of the University Center Wednesday just before Chancellor David Werner gave his "State of the University" address.

Workers were protesting their wages, which they claim are the lowest of all civil service workers in Illinois.

Workers showed their solidarity by wearing green clothing and buttons. Approximately 40 workers were at the main entrance to the University Center, passing out fliers with wage statistics and other information, including a message that could be mailed to SIU President Ted Sanders.

The workers, who are members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 2887, claim in the flier that "if there is enough money to provide for a 2 percent equity (raise) for faculty, why isn't there money to pay civil service employees a better wage?"

This is the second picket on campus this year. The first, held by SIUE building service workers, took place during Welcome Week. They were also picketing over low wages.

Greek Week coming to end

The 16 sororities and fraternities, totaling nearly 500 student members, of SIUE are taking part in Greek Week.

Greek Week winds down with a greek picnic at 5 p.m. on Thursday and an awards program at 3 p.m. on Friday. Awards will be presented to the winners of greek week and other events for the year.

Also, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Thursday, the greeks will have philanthropy booths set up on campus to raise money and collect goods for various charities in the area.

One possible reason for the drop in enrollment is a strong job market. Tarpey said that rather than attending college, a growing number of people may be choosing to enter the workforce. However, Tarpey also said that there is no way to gauge this factor.

The report set a goal of increasing black enrollment to a percentage comparable to the black population in the region and in the state. To obtain this goal, SIUE has beefed up its recruitment efforts in areas of Chicago that are dominantly black.

Our sister school, SIUC, has had success with this method. In the last five years, the percentage of black entering freshmen has gone up from 18.4 percent in 1993 to 20 percent in 1997. In addition, the percentage of SIUC's population that is black is greater than the proportion of blacks in Illinois' population.

Tarpey suggested that this might be because train service runs directly from Chicago to Carbondale, providing easier transportation for students. SIUC has also provided housing opportunities for students away from home, whereas SIUE has historically been primarily a commuter school.

SIUE's evolution away from a commuter campus may provide a jump-start for the recruiting process. More than 2,300 students are currently living in university housing and, for the first time in SIUE's 33-year history, the majority of freshmen are living on campus.

Despite the increase in overall population, a continued focus will be placed on the potential factors for the decrease in black population. Between these efforts and enhanced recruitment, the university is working to regain black enrollment on campus.

With a desire to increase professional options and expand the choice of courses for SIUE students, Werner said the university plans to work on continuing a partnership with SIU-Carbondale. He said SIUE will eventually add more independent doctoral programs. Werner said that in working with Carbondale, SIUE will be a "full partner - not a stepchild."

"Since its beginning in 1957, SIUE's space has grown

"We can't be complacent with our record," he said.

In noting the growth of faculty, Werner cited a remark by a colleague: "I've been here so long, I don't know anyone anymore." Werner admitted he sometimes feels the same way with so many new instructors on campus.

Currently, 37 percent of the faculty are women and 6.2 percent are African-American. Werner said he hopes to see both those figures change, with women eventually reaching 50 percent and blacks achieving the same percentages as the black student population. SIUE full-time faculty teaches 80 percent of the courses and despite the enrollment increases, there is only a 14.9 student to faculty ratio.

Among the goals Werner outlined were: plans to add one new undergraduate degree program per year for the next six years, to increase student retention, work on accreditation for the five remaining non-accredited departments and eventually increasing admission standards.

Some days are better than others

Danielle Belton

I really didn't want to get up Wednesday morning.

I woke up as I do every morning, really sleepy. I knew I was going to have a long day. I had papers to rewrite, a presentation to give, a speech to cover for the Alestle, two classes to attend and a newspaper to put together. Plus I was sick all day. But I didn't have much of a choice. All I could think about was how this place annoyed me so.

I didn't want to go to class and chuckled as I recalled how one of my professors had once referred to SIUE as the Wal-Mart of college education. Though I originally wanted to attend school here, some days I would wonder why that was. My father kept getting SIUE confused with Carbondale when I was trying to enroll here. Today was one of those days when I wondered if I should have gone to Carbondale. After all, the newspaper there has a printing press and a building. Such a boring little school we have here, I would think some days. Nothing ever happens.

When I arrived at the University Center to cover the speech, a group of women and a few men were standing in front of the building dressed in green and white. They all had on shiny white buttons and were passing out fliers. Oddly enough, I wasn't given one. Normally, I'm a flier magnet.

My stomach rumbled because I hadn't eaten breakfast as I made my way to the Meridian Hall. I felt weak from my nausea, but I knew this had to be covered because if I didn't do it, it wouldn't get done. And there are just some stories you can't cancel on.

When I got there, the first thing I thought was, "I hope this isn't going to be boring." As a matter of fact, I just knew this was going to be boring. I just kept thinking how I was probably going to have to fight to stay awake. I joked with our photographer that maybe we should play a game of telephone with the picketing civil service workers to spark some excitement. You know the game: You whisper a story to one person and she repeats it to the next and so on until you've got quite a tale at the end. It was suggested we start with something along the lines of, "Did you hear he's really taking the raise?" and see what the quote becomes after it traveled through the line. But we decided that wasn't the day to bring back yellow journalism.

I kept fantasizing that maybe the civil service workers were going to do something outrageous, like jump up and start singing "My Country 'tis of Thee" in the middle of the chancellor's address. I watched a documentary the other night about Muhammad Ali called "Aka Cassius Clay" that showed the protests and sit-ins of the '60s. I daydreamed about all those women in green and white, some the same age as my mother, getting up and chanting, "Hell no, we won't go!"

But this isn't the '60s, and this wasn't a sit-in. I watched as all the workers politely found their seats and waited for the address to begin. People tell me there used to be protests on this campus all the time during the '60s and '70s, but I find that hard to believe. It's a whole other world here now. People barely get upset enough to write a letter to the editor about the university. How did they ever get up enough energy to protest anything?

Snapping out of my daydream, I realized that I had better find a seat. The back had filled up quickly, and it looked like there was going to be quite a crowd. As I maneuvered to the front I noticed that it was practically empty. The people at the address were not much different from the students in the classes. No one wants to sit up front in English 101, hardly anyone sat up front at the speech either.

I sat in the front for two reasons. One, because I wanted to be able to see the chancellor's face clearly, and two, because I didn't want to sit next to anyone else. Part of me also wanted the officials to notice that the Alestle was there to cover the event. I'm pretty big on being seen.

The speech began and I was surprised. It wasn't boring. Chancellor Werner isn't the most fiery of speakers, but he was very direct and informative. I was surprised and fascinated at where this university is headed, and I wondered what was it becoming. I thought how I was attending SIUE while it is still in its stages of transition from commuter school to residential school. Right now it has a sort of half-made bed feeling. It's finished in some ways and in others still looks a mess.

I daydreamed about what this place would be like in 20 years if the administration is able to keep up the pace. Would I be able to come back to this campus and see an entirely different picture? At the rate the school is going and growing, SIUE is on the path of becoming one of the largest and most popular universities in the Midwest. People from St. Louis might regard SIUE in the same way they talk about St. Louis University, or even in the same way they talk about Carbondale.

After the speech was over, I sat and talked with three professors from the Department of Education. All reflected the optimism of the chancellor's speech. One woman, Barbara Havis, was concerned about how SIUE doesn't get credit for its programs because it's often confused with Carbondale. After listening to the speech and hearing what she said, I thought maybe someday it would be the other way around.

Commentary

Book details impeachment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only one president, Andrew Johnson, was impeached and forced to stand trial in the Senate. One American who knows much about that 1868 proceeding is Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, who would preside over a Senate trial for President Clinton.

In his 1992 book "Grand Inquests," Rehnquist detailed the House impeachment and Senate trial of Johnson and those conducted in 1804 for Supreme Court Justice Samuel Chase.

"He probably knows more about impeachment than anyone else," Washington lawyer John Roberts says.

The House Judiciary Committee must decide whether Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's report suggesting impeachable conduct by Clinton requires impeachment hearings. If such a full inquiry led to articles of impeachment, the full House would have to vote whether to impeach — the political equivalent of an indictment.

Selected House members then would serve as prosecutors, and the 100 senators as a jury. Washington lawyer Theodore Olson cites the "scholarly detail" of Rehnquist's book in calling him "one of the experts." The book tracks two historic Senate trials that ended in acquittals, not ouster from office. Rehnquist suggests that in each the Senate put aside partisan politics to reach results that best aided the nation and the integrity of the process.

"There were undoubtedly political partisans on both sides of the aisle in each case, but each time enough members of the majority party balked at the demands for party unity to acquit both Chase and Johnson," he wrote.

A two-thirds vote of those senators participating is needed for conviction and ouster by the Senate.

Noting that the Supreme Court's 1998-99 term beginning Oct. 5 could yield the fewest decisions of any term in decades, Roberts says, "If the chief justice finds he has additional obligations this year, he should be able to attend to them."

At the nation's highest court, Rehnquist has the well-earned reputation of running a tight ship. He zealously keeps oral argument proceedings on schedule, sometimes cutting off attorneys in mid-sentence. His eight colleagues suggest in private that he runs the court's closed-door deliberations in much the same manner.

Such instincts might have to be suppressed in a Senate trial, however. In Johnson's trial last century, most of the procedural disputes were resolved by the Senate itself and not presiding Chief Justice Salmon Chase.

The Johnson trial took nearly two months, but those who know Rehnquist well say it might have been much shorter had the current chief justice been on the scene.

A lifelong Republican, Rehnquist was appointed to the Supreme Court in 1972 by President Richard Nixon, and was elevated to the chief justice's job in 1986 by President Ronald Reagan.

In the early 1980s, Rehnquist often told acquaintances he could not picture himself still working at age 70. But his promotion and his wife's death in 1991 changed his retirement time-schedule.

He will be 74 in two weeks, but no one expects Rehnquist to retire before the presidential election in 2000.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1998 ◆

BY COREY STULCE
WRITER-AT-LARGE
cstulce@siue.edu

I know quite a few college students, and all of them have lots of stress. It's just hard to juggle all of the things that dominate the day, be it studying, a night job, socializing or alcohol. Actually, the latter seems to alleviate my stress as well as add to it.

So I try to avoid things that irk me the wrong way. But for some reason, I keep noticing things that make me say, "What the hell is wrong with the world?"

I completely loathe the hype surrounding the fall television season. Why must the networks make such a huge deal every year about 40 new shows that are going to be canceled before the first commercial break even hits? They try to make us feel as if our lives will be empty if we don't sit on the couch night after night and watch this tired crap.

I can hear that bellowing voice, the one that does all the narration of movie previews, saying, "DON'T MISS ONE EPISODE OF 'FRIENDS' THIS SEASON, BECAUSE YOU WON'T BELIEVE WHAT WILL HAPPEN NEXT!" Gee, let me guess: they'll have sex and talk about sex and maybe some of them will get together and complain about sex.

And then there's the commercials. If I see that little rodent Taco Bell chihuahua one more freakin' time ... Why has he not gotten violent diarrhea yet and died? I would give a kidney if I could punt that dog into the ocean. Great, I can hear PETA getting ready to phone me right now.

I can also certainly live without remakes of songs that are not begging to be remade. Do we need a sub-par pop group remaking another sub-par pop group's song? (i.e., "Cruel Summer.") The ditty, which was OK in the '80s, is barely a decade old and now some candy-ass, Euro-trash, ABBA-esque pop foursome like Ace of Bass needs to redo it?

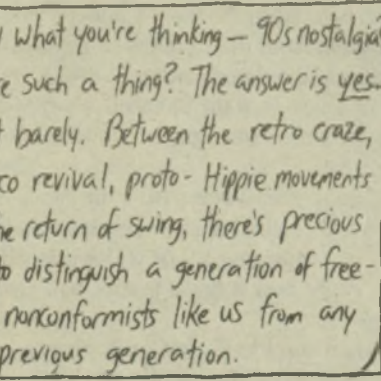

So to alleviate my stress, I will continue to watch reruns of "The Simpsons" and listen to good '80s trash like Adam Ant and Dexy's Midnight Runners.

Ask Alli Khat...

Meet the Alestle's new advice columnist, Alli Khat.

Khat is in an excellent position to offer words of wisdom to people with problems because she's been on the SIUE campus for more than six years.

"I've always wanted to write a column like Abby or Ann," Khat said. "After all, I've had lots of experiences and perhaps my knowledge will save someone from the misfortunes and mistakes I've suffered."

Khat originally came to SIUE to study sociology. "I've always wanted to help people," she said. She later switched majors, first to psychology, then nursing, then education, then physical therapy. "It was all so confusing. I want to devote my life to helping others but studying was so hard," she said.

She said enlightenment came during a Jerry Springer episode that featured battling bisexual roommates. "I realized then that so many people need help, and I could do that while reaching out to many, many others."

The super-senior is now a mass comm major and said she hopes to graduate "sometime in the next century." She added, "Hey, don't laugh, buddy. It's closer than you think."

You've met Khat. Now take a look at her first column in the Alestle. You'll find it in next Thursday's Lifestyle section. Send letters for Alli Khat to: The Alestle, Box 1167, Attn: Alli Khat or drop them off at the Alestle's office.

News from the foul line

by Todd Spann

Hello

Lawrence Phillips could be in a Rams uniform again if St. Louis believes they need to fill in a gap left by Greg Hill, who broke his leg last Sunday.

Yeah ... this makes perfect sense.

Especially when you have a running back who led the team in preseason rushing, is already signed and who just stands on the sideline wondering what else he has to do to catch the eye of Coach Vermeil.

But let's pass on Robert Holcombe, who has a spotless record, and bring in a player who constantly drew more boo's than Albert Belle returning to left field in Cleveland.

Of course, it's just my sarcasm, and they will probably surprise us all by signing Bam Morris.

Hull

Speaking of boo's, Brett Hull was back in town with his new team, the Dallas Stars.

Like the good fans we are, we showed him the appropriate way of welcoming back a player who gave us 10 great seasons — we booed him. That makes sense.

We will miss you

Track and field lost one of its best Monday.

Florence Griffith Joyner died of an apparent heart seizure, police and fire officials said.

She always showed a strong heart in everything she did. And we will miss her.

Homestand

The Cougars start another homestand this weekend. Whether it is soccer or volleyball, go and check it out. The weather should be good, and the price is cheap. In fact it is free!

Cougars look to awaken offense this weekend

Two-game homestand will hopefully boost Cougar confidence

BY BRETT LICATA
SPORTS WRITER

The inability to put the ball in the net has the SIUE men's soccer team carrying a dismal 1-5 record into this weekend's homestand.

The Cougars will try to get on the winning track after dropping their last four when they take the field Saturday against St. Joseph's College.

After an upset win over Quincy last weekend, St. Joseph's will bring a wealth of confidence into Saturday's matchup.

The University of Indianapolis will pay a visit to Bob Guelker Field on Sunday afternoon.

"Indianapolis is a very competitive team," head coach Ed Huneke said. "They have a number of good English players that will be a handful."

The Cougars fell to 0-2 as they began their conference schedule last weekend on the road.

A penalty kick goal put the University of Wisconsin-Parkside up 1-0 in the 25th minute on Saturday.

Freshman Justin Huneke answered for SIUE in the 64th minute. Matt Little served up a corner kick to the foot of Huneke who beat the goalkeeper to tie the game 1-1.

The Cougars held the edge in the second half, but a mistake on defense caused Wisconsin-Parkside to score the game-winning goal when the ball trickled over the goal line.

Before the game, junior Justin Berniax injured his ankle and didn't play, but he should be available for this weekend's contests. Cress Maddox broke his shoulder during the game and could be out the remainder of the season.

Does anybody know the score? — by Andy Korbismeyer

The baseball season is coming to an end for the St. Louis Cardinals. The season will obviously be marked by the accomplishments of strongman Mark McGwire. It occurred to me Tuesday evening that other than McGwire, fans probably don't know much about the Cardinals season.

Most people who are not hard-core baseball fans can tell you how many homers McGwire has and probably how many Sammy Sosa has. This race has captivated our attention, and I try not to miss an at-bat. Yet aside from watching McGwire hit, how many people watch the game? When McGwire is up, conversations come to a halt, homework stops, people from all over converge on the television or radio nearby. After McGwire does his business, it is like the scene in "Jerry Maguire" when he is fired, and everyone is at silent attention. As soon as he leaves the building, the hustle and bustle of everyday life continues.

Personally, on Tuesday I was flipping back and forth between the game and the season premier of "Mad About You." Hey, what would you rather watch, Eli Marrero go 0 for 3 or Helen Hunt wrapped in a towel? On Wednesday night, Randy Johnson was on the mound for the Astros. I don't think that Johnson facing Luis Ordaz would be able to compete with finding out what happens between Brandon and Kelly on "Beverly Hills 90210." Once again I will be flipping channels. Thursday is no contest: the season premier of "Friends" vs. the Montreal Expos. The remote control will be getting a workout this week. One Cardinal game that probably will keep my attention will be Sunday's season finale. Sure it's the last game, McGwire will put his signature on history with his last at-bat. But most importantly, the only other thing on television will be the Rams.

Where to be this weekend:

The women's volleyball team keeps rolling along with a record of 11-2. They play at home on Friday. For people who enjoy good volleyball, you will find it here. And for those who think women's sports are too slow, come out and let these ladies pound a few balls in your direction. I guarantee you will change your mind.

Saturday is a HUGE game for the women's soccer team. They're off to a strong 3-1 start, but the St. Joseph's College Pumas are coming to town at 3 p.m. Saturday. The Pumas are ranked #6 nationally, and the present group of seniors on the Lady Cougars squad is 1-5 against St. Joe for their careers. Coach Brian Korbesmeyer has 99 career wins as the women's coach, and there would be no sweeter way to get #100 than to beat the Pumas. To do so, career leading scorer Janece Friederich will have to prove that she is one of the best in the nation. If Megan Beagles can match Friederich's intensity up top, they could be a deadly duo. In the backfield Karin Tighe and Tasha Siegel will have to be as vocal as they have ever been in directing others around. And for the freshmen, well, get ready for some big-time soccer. I hope to see you fans at the games this weekend. They should be exciting.

Against Lewis University Sunday, SIUE played solid on defense, but couldn't get on the scoreboard.

Lewis found the net once in the 11th minute and again in the 85th minute to get past the Cougars 2-0.

Offense will be the key this weekend as SIUE tries to tally its first GLVC victory of the season.

"Our defense is playing well, but we have to pick up the scoring," Huneke said. "The injuries are a concern. We're not as deep as I'd like us to be."

The games against St. Joseph's and Indianapolis both start at 12:30 p.m.

*These top ratings are based on TIAA's exceptional financial strength, claims-paying ability and overall operating performance. Source: Morningstar, Inc., January 31, 1998. Morningstar is an independent service that rates mutual funds and variable annuities. The top 10% of funds in an investment category receive five stars and the next 22.5% receive four stars. Morningstar proprietary ratings reflect historical risk-adjusted performance and are subject to change every month. They are calculated from the account's three-, five-, and ten-year average annual returns in excess of 90-day Treasury bill returns with appropriate fee adjustments, and a risk factor that reflects performance below 90-day T-bill returns. The overall star ratings referred to above are Morningstar's published ratings, which are weighted averages of its three-, five-, and ten-year ratings for periods ending January 31, 1998.
