SIUE proposes 100 percent plus parking increase

Students, faculty and staff may have to pay $55 extra within the next two years

By Roy Gilmore
Editor in Chief

Increase and parking stickers are two phrases that go hand in hand when dealing with SIUE.

At the Friday, Feb. 9, student senate meeting, Bob Vanzo, director of Administrative Services, unveiled a bond proposal that would increase parking sticker prices as much as $35 for the upcoming year, and a possible $30 dollars the following year.

The proposal was supported by the Parking and Traffic Committee, student senate and staff senate. The faculty senate did not support the bond proposal: instead, they supported the original

The increase in parking sticker prices does not just affect the students, it affects the faculty, staff and administration, also.

If the new bond proposal gets approved, there will be a $35 dollar increase across the board for this upcoming fall and, possibly, a $30 increase the following year.

The increase would put SIUE about in the middle of

Amnesty deadline is approaching quickly for phone fraud offenders

By Brian Walsh
News Editor

February 29, at midnight, will be the last chance that people who participated in phone fraud can take advantage of the Amnesty Program.

This past summer, university officers at SIUE discovered that, over the past two years, over $1 million in long-distance phone calls had been defrauded from the school.

In December, the Amnesty Program was created to give the people who took advantage of the code that was used to charge the university for their phone calls a chance to make arrangements for repayment without the fear of being prosecuted.

According to SIUE, there have been a large number of people who have contacted the university and are now taking advantage of the Amnesty Program.

"As of last night, over 670 people have called," Ken Neher, vice chancellor of Administration, said. "Yesterday alone, there were over 100 phone calls."

The university even had to add more workers to man the phone-lines to answer questions and to accept confessions. What once started out as a one-person job has ended up taking eight people to accomplish.

But time is running out. There will be no exceptions. Those who miss the Feb. 29 deadline will lose the chance to participate in the Amnesty Program, which could lead to very serious consequences.

If the total amount of an individual's bill exceeds $300, under Illinois law,

Science Building's tile buckles and cracks from shifting floor

By Melanie Adams
Assistant News Editor

"We heard a loud crack coming from the back of the room near the wall," Professor Lyman Holden said, "and we thought that the sound was coming from the other classroom. One of the students I was talking to said, 'What's that?' and the other said, 'I don't know, let's get out of here.' Then we heard a loud crack and a pop and saw that the tile in one of the walkways in the classroom had raised up a ten foot section."

Professor Holden and two of his students experienced the buckling and cracking tile Tuesday afternoon, prior to Holden's class lecture in statistics. Neither the students nor the professor were hurt.

This is not the first time that the flooring in the Science Building has buckled and cracked. In fact, the third floor of the science building has had problems of tile buckling as well.

The buckling is attributed to the fact that when the quarry tile was laid in the Science Building, no expansion joints were added, Len Menoni, of Facilities Management, said.

An expansion joint allows the concrete base

Blues get Gretzky

•Wayne Gretzky is a St. Louis Blue. The deal that has been months in the making came to fruition Tuesday night. The Blues acquired the National Hockey League's career scoring leader from the Los Angeles Kings for three players and a number 1 draft choice in 1997.

Forbes wins in Arizona

Million-dollar man

•Kurt Wait's macadamia fudge torte was a rich confection indeed: He won $1 million Tuesday as the first man ever to capture the grand prize at the Pillsbury Bake-Off. Wait, 43, a single father from Redwood City, Calif., also won a $10,000 kitchen makeover after viewers of a network television special voted his recipe the most appealing.

Cars hit buses; 6 are hurt

•Two school buses loaded with youngsters were hit from behind in separate accidents Tuesday afternoon in Cahokia and Collinsville. Six children were hurt in the Collinsville accident; none were injured in Cahokia. The children were taken to Anderson Hospital in Maryville, where they were treated and released.

Businesses stereotype women

•The stereotype among men that women can't have the kids and be dedicated to their jobs at the same time still is keeping female executives from making it to the top of corporate America, a new study reported Tuesday. Women who have pushed ahead say it's because of styles that make men feel comfortable.

Police search for Edwardsville woman

•Police are still searching for a 41-year-old Edwardsville woman who failed to return to her home on Plum Street early Saturday morning.

Elizabeth M. Jones was wearing a blue-gray sweatshirt with a teddy bear on the front and dark blue pants when she was last seen. She is black, weighs about 200 pounds and is 5 feet 3 inches tall.

Jones has a schizophrenic disorder and has not taken her medication since she disappeared, police reported.

Police are urging anyone who may have seen Jones to call the department at 656-2131.

Sailor guilty of indecent assault

•A Navy cook accused of groping and harassing an enlisted woman aboard a commercial airline was convicted of indecent assault.

The serviceman, Chief Petty Officer George Powell, had pleaded guilty Monday of simple assault, but the prosecutor sought a conviction on more serious charges.

Powell had told the military judge, Cmdr. Nels Kelstrom, that he was so drunk on the flight on Oct. 27 that he could not remember anything.

to expand and contract, allowing the tile above it to shift accordingly.

However, since the concrete base in this classroom did not contain the expansion joints, the result was the buckling of the tile above, Menoni said.

Classes scheduled for the classroom were moved to other classrooms Wednesday morning, and a temporary flooring made of plywood was laid so classes could be held Wednesday afternoon, Menoni said.

Menoni does not give blame to the contractors for the lack of expansion joints in the flooring since the joints were not put in the original plan.

Menoni also said that due to the expense of removing the flooring and putting in the expansion joints, the joints will not be placed in the floors and the contractors are just re-tiling the floor today.

Jeremy Paschall / Alesstle

Professor Lyman Holden and two other students rushed out of classroom 2224 in the science Building after hearing cracking noises. A large section of tile buckled under the expansion of concrete. This hasn't been the first time the Science Building has experienced this occurrence.

Former president clarifies accessibility complaints

I would like to respond to the article in the Feb. 1 issue of the Intelligencer entitled "Students Question SIUE Accessibility."

My name is Robert W. Fleming; I was the president of the New Horizons organization from 1992 through 1995. The New Horizons organization is an organization that protects the rights and meets the needs of students with a disability on the campus of SIUE.

I agree with Brenda Bertels that there are accessibility problems on the SIUE campus. However, she has failed mention the fact that a vast majority of her accessibility problems have been addressed by the ADA committee on campus. Bertels would have known this if she had done some investigating before whining to the newspaper.

I would like to respond to Bertel's complaint on the lack of support given to the students with disabilities from the Disability Support Services.

During my presidency, I was confronted by Bertels regarding accessibility problems that concerned her on two different occasions. I immediately responded to these accessibility problems and I have each one of my responses documented.

I feel that socializing and being visible to the public is a very important component in the abolishment of the negative stereotypes associated with people with disabilities.

It is true that the New Horizons organization has had two pizza and bowling parties in the past. However, Bertels failed to explain the reason for these parties. The reason for these parties was to show our appreciation to SIUE for making the bowling alley wheelchair accessible after 26 years.

It may be true that Bertels does not need any help in socializing with others. Nonetheless, I feel that there is a need for Bertels to do a more thorough job investigating her complaints before making unjustifiable statements.

SIUE professors have virtues black students should strive for

Editor's note: This letter is being printed anonymously because the students asked that it run this way so other students won't feel that they are trying to improve their grades.

Now that Black History Month is coming to a close, we feel that it is only fitting that we acknowledge the strength and character of at least two of SIUE's outstanding black faculty—Professors Fred Stokes and Jennifer Hamer-Cotten.

These two possess many of the virtues that black SIUE students should strive for. They are intelligent. They work hard. They are successful due to their efforts. They are patient and caring towards students. In addition, they bring a dynamic style and vitality to the classroom that we think is unique. Not only are we learning, but we have fun doing it.

They attend one another's classes and this suggests that they not only share ideas in regards to teaching, but that they have a mutual respect and admiration of each other.

When we as African-American students witness this team effort inside and outside the classroom, we feel enormous pride. They make us realize that with determination and strength we can achieve anything. It is with pride and gratitude that we write this letter.

Black History Month is ending and we will not hear much about "great" African-Americans until next February. However, we should feel pride in knowing that two of African America's very best are right here at SIUE.

Housing management goes to great lengths to help solve student problems

I have been living at Tower Lake Apartments since November 1994. During my stay here I have heard a lot of negative comments and criticism about management both at the Commons building and the main Housing Office.

I have dealt with the Housing Office on a few occasions. I have found them to be very prompt and helpful, going to great lengths to solve the problems and accommodate the needs of the student.

I just want to take this opportunity to praise the management at the Housing Office and Commons building. Their services are caring, efficient and excellent.

Professor and SIUE alumni release book on education

By David Weil
 News Reporter

Three SIUE educators have recently released a book titled "Parents and Teachers as Partners: Issues and Challenges," dealing with parental involvement in education.

Robert E. Rockwell, professor and program director of Early Childhood Education in the department of Curriculum and Instruction, collaborated with SIUE alumni Lynda C. Andre, now a kindergarten teacher for the Edwardsville Community Schools, and Mary K. Howley, a Birth to Five resource specialist, over the past three years in writing the book. Both women were former students of Rockwell.

The book was written to fill the need for an organized system to introduce teachers to the benefits of constructive communications with parents.

"Early childhood programs must not only welcome parents, but actively encourage and seek their participation in the education of their children," Rockwell said. "Teachers and administrators must have the skill and desire to involve all families in meaningful roles within the school community. Parents of cultural, ethnic, and familial differences must perceive the school as 'their' school."

Rockwell feels that the book has been released at an opportune time.

"This book is coming out at a time that it is really needed. I've written many books, but this is the one I've always wanted to write," Rockwell said.

The book discusses traditional means of communicating with students subjects such as report cards and parent/teacher conferences. It also explores volunteerism, field trips and even video communication.

"We focus on a multitude of strategies that aren't textbookish—they are all field tested between the three of us," Rockwell said.

While all teachers may not utilize all of the techniques found in the book, Rockwell hopes to see teachers using whatever methods they feel are most helpful.

"It's like getting in a boat. Pull on one oar and you go in circles. Pull on both oars and you can reach a common goal. That's parental involvement to me," said Rockwell.

The book was published by Harcourt Brace College Publishers and is available in the SIUE bookstore.

If the total amount of an individual's bill falls below $300, under Illinois State Law, it is considered a misdemeanor punishable by up to one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

And if state law is not enough, SIUE can impose action against offenders. Students will be referred for disciplinary action under the University Student Conduct Code.

"Student employees and graduate students will lose their jobs," Neher said. "It could affect students participating in graduation, and at the very worst, students can be dismissed from the university."

On March 1, the names of the people involved in the Amnesty Program will be taken off the list of suspects and the remainder of the list will be handed over to the police.

Neher urges whoever participated in the phone fraud to call in and be placed on the amnesty list.

$10 fee increase across the board.

Vanzo explained that one of the reasons the previous $10 increase in price, was imposed was to hire an engineering firm to come out, look at the lots and see what things needed to be fixed and how much it would cost.

Before the firm came out to look at the lots, Vanzo said that there was an open meeting held in January to discuss the situation. Some of the concerns from the 40 or 50 people (mainly students) that attended the meeting were put on a report and given to the engineering company to look for and try to find a solution for.

"The engineering firm found that our lots were in worse shape than we had anticipated," Vanzo said. "What we got from the firm was what we needed to do to the lots and other improvements that they felt we needed."

The major improvement the firm and SIUE found needed was to resurface all of the lots that had not been done, improve lighting all over campus and put in more emergency phones.

Cost

Illinois state schools in parking sticker costs. But that's not how Bob Vanzo, director of Administrative Services, looks at the increase.

"We didn't set our prices to compare to other universities," he said, "it was just used as a measure of reasonability."

Not only will students have to pay more to park, faculty, and that includes Chancellor Belek, will have to start paying for parking.

"In the fall, all university vehicles will have to pay to park," Vanzo said. "They might not buy a decal for the vehicles, but they will have to pay a fee for parking."

Also, Vanzo said that there will be a fee assessed to those organizations that ask that no parking tickets be issued at certain times because of an event they are holding.

"Many organizations ask for no ticketers during their event time or where they plan for people to park, and that's OK, but now they are going to have to pay a small fee to do so," he said.

"Actually, those people that attended the meeting helped decide where the parking lot and access road was going to be," Vanzo said. But whether the lot will be a green sticker lot or a red sticker lot has not yet been addressed. Vanzo said that that is a policy

Another change Vanzo has discussed is keeping the University Center parking lot open all of the time.

"We kept it open over break and charged people to park and we made good money," he said.

Vanzo also said that none of the increased fee money will go to the new parking meters that have been placed along campus.

"The new meters have already been paid for with existing funds," he said.

Lower Level of the University Center

Nick Adams, the Parking and Traffic Committee chairman, agrees with Vanzo.

"We all are in agreement that those things need to be repaired," he said, "but the questions are how do you pay for it and when do you want to do it."

That's where the bond issue comes in.

"With the $10 price increase, there was no exact time frame in which the lots or lighting or phones would get done. It was a method that paid for itself only when you had the money," Vanzo explained. "But with the bonds, the project would begin, if they are approved by the board of trustees, by May or June of 1997 and would go until October 1998.

"Of course, during the winter months there would be no asphalt being put down, but that's when the lighting and emergency phones will be worked on. And the spring and summer would be when the lots would be repaired," Vanzo continued.

Also added in the project was a new parking lot being built adjacent to lot E behind the Communications Building. The lot would be used by music, art and design, and engineering students.

issue that will be dealt with.

Also in the bond proposal package was the option for a shuttle bus, but this was later dropped.

"It was just going to be used for evening classes and basically it was another measure of security, but the cost of the bus would have increased the parking prices another five dollars," Vanzo said.

The bond proposal is not carved in stone yet. The proposal still has to await approval from the board of trustees and President Ted Sanders. Then, if they get approval, they will have to interview for an engineering firm, hopefully by February of next year, to do the work.

"We hope to be able to bid in February because that is one of the slow months for asphalt companies and hopefully that would increase the amount of engineering companies wanting to bid for our project and possibly decrease our cost a little bit," Vanzo said.

Vanzo also pointed out that if the bids went out for the entire project, instead of one or two lots at a time, the bid could be decreased and more firms would be interested in the total project.

"Everyone has to realize that there is no money coming from the state for this project. Everything generated must come from within—fees, fines and meters," Vanzo said. "If we see that we have been too conservative (set the prices too high), we can still lower the rates at any time. But in the same token, we can also increase the prices if something drastic beyond our control happens."

Q: Will I be charged through the Student Conduct Code?

A: Yes, unless you come forward before the amnesty program ends on February 29.

A: Yes. Many have already been traced, and the process is ongoing.

A: We will respect confidentiality if you come forward during the amnesty program by February 29. After that, you will be subject to arrest and prosecution, which are public records.

Q: If I come forward, will I be assured confidentiality?

A: Yes, if you come forward during the amnesty program by February 29. Only individuals involved with the investigation and those handling payments will have access to the names of individuals who come forward.

Q: Can the major phone companies come after me for charges if I turn myself in?

A: Not if you participate in the amnesty program. If you do not come forward, they can take action against you and the party you called.

Q: Will I be able to register for future semesters if I still owe phone bills?

A: Yes, if payments to the Bursar's Office are made on time; otherwise no.

Q: Will this affect my ability to receive federal grants and loans?

A: Not if you participate in the amnesty program by February 29; otherwise yes.

Q: I received the University letter, but I didn't make any illegal calls. Do I still have to contact the University?

A: No. We sent the letter to the home addresses of all persons who lived in Tower Lake and the Residence Hall during the applicable period.

Lighting the candles of hope

By Darryl Howlett
Lifestyle Editor

They were small in number, but large in spirit. It was cold outside, but the flames of dedication and celebration were enough to warm them.

On Tuesday, several SIUE students attended a candlelight march, documentary and discussion entitled "Eyes On The Prize." However, not only the past was discussed, but also the present and future of African-Americans.

DeMarcus Miller, along with the Black History Programming Committee, sponsored the first annual event.

"The purpose of this evening is to pay our respects to the great leaders who have helped us light our way to college," Miller, who is majoring in political science said. "We want everybody to know and understand that they were people who fought hard to get us here. We need to bring some unity of the past back on this campus," Miller said.

The cold, chilling winds diminished any attempt to light candles for the march, but the students were determined to light candles as the vigil was brought inside the Commons TV lounge. With the successful lighting of the candles, a stirring rendition of the Black National Anthem "Lift Every Voice And Sing" was sung while the light of every candle shined. Each student sang in unison as the last of the song came: "... let us march on until victory is won ..."

The documentary "Eyes On The Prize" is a highly-extolled project which has aired on PBS in recent years. The students reacted to the speeches on Malcolm X, Martin Luther King, Stokely Carmichael, with eyes focused.

Then came the speeches of the Black Panthers and the view of the Watts Riots. Students were actually grimacing as they watched marchers being ridiculed and beaten on their march to Jackson, Mississippi to take up the march of James Meridith, who became the first African-American to enter the University of Mississippi.

After the film, students gave their impressions of the past and compared it to the present.

"I know, outside of America, control of government is different in other countries. In my country of Barbados, we control the government we are a majority. When I look at this country, I see the great leaders such as Malcolm X, Martin Luther King. However, I do not see a leader today to capture the attention of African-Americans," Andrew Carrington said. Carrington, 30, is a grad student who is now trying to get a degree in finance.

Another student, Chandra Crudup, saw a similar problem in the African-American community.

"During that time period, political leaders provided different ideals, but they still reached for a common goal. Today it will be hard to get everyone to move in the same direction.

In the process we are watching our communities fall from grace," Crudup said.

"Also, back then it was blatant racism and now we have a type of institutionalized racism. So it must be handled differently than before. Instead of one person or leader to make change, it is everyone's job."

Other subjects covered during the discussion included economic empowerment of the black community, lack of participation on campus and the breakdown of the family in many African-American communities.

After the program, all those who attended felt the importance of the event.

"Overall, the program went very well. But I believe more participation was needed from our African-American brothers and sisters. But I do believe that we need to keep organizing programs like this," Stacey Keith said.

Those who left the first-time event rededicated themselves with spreading the word of the need of unity and cooperation with those last verses of "Lift Every Voice And Sing," still ringing in the hearts and minds of the students.

"... Let us march on until victory is won."

Before I get into today's column, I would just like to say that I hope everyone was enlightened and learned more about African-American history this month. But by all means, don't stop simply because Black History Month is over. Be sure to keep gaining knowledge throughout the year and in the years to come. And for those who felt they should only gain knowledge for the month of February, learning never stops. If you want to learn more history, go to a library or take a course in African-American history. For history is in the palm of your hand and in the vastness of our minds. And with that stated, on to the column.

Forgive me, please. Please! Forgive me. Baby, pleaaaseee forgive me!

How often these days have you found yourself asking for someone's forgiveness or having to forgive someone who did an unspeakable act? How often has someone asked for your forgiveness, when you really wanted to flush their faces down the toilet? I know, I've been there. I remember back in the day when some kid would steal something of yours and get the living crap beat out of them, only for good ol' momma to tell you to forgive that person.

It's a viable lesson, because sooner or later (most likely sooner) you will do something stupid or outrageous like accidentally spilling paint on your dad's new custom made Lexus, washing your roommate's dark and white clothes together, or simply acting like a total buffoon.

Forgiveness

By Darryl Howlett

And of course, we can never have enough forgiveness when it comes to relationships. Here, forgiveness involves everything from coming home late (or not at all) to leaving the toilet seat up. But remember, where there is love, there is forgiveness.

With spring break on the horizon (Thank God), it is time to forgive those who have mistreated you or vice versa. To forgive that professor who gave you a D when you know you deserve an A. Let's just have a national day for forgiveness. Forgiveness for everything.

Your car.

Your woman.

Your man.

Your life.

Yourself for getting cold busted (You know what I'm talking about)!

Because when you forgive, love flows in the air. (And you don't have to kill anyone ... okay not kill them, just hurt'm real bad.

Anyway I hope everyone has a safe and relaxing ... did I mention relaxing ...uhhmm sleep. So, in the meantime, have fun so you can come back and finish the rest of those seven weeks of school.

SIUE teams excel at Schick Super Hoops regional event

Jeremy Paschall/Alestle

By Eli Savoie
Sports Editor

Sunday is supposed to be a day for rest, but for two groups of SIUE students, last Sunday was anything but restful.

Da Chronic and Court Masters, two basketball teams from the SIUE intramural program, travelled Sunday to the University of Illinois-Chicago to compete in the midwest regional of the Schick Super Hoops 3-on-3 basketball tournament and both teams were successful in their efforts. Da Chronic captured first place while Court Masters finished third.

Da Chronic knocked off a team from Michigan State in the semifinals while Court Masters lost to a team from the University of Illinois. Da Chronic then went on to beat the U of I team in overtime for the championship.

"We had to play seven games between about 10:30 and 3:30," Mo Rodgers of Da Chronic said Wednesday afternoon. "It was tough, I started to cramp up during the last game."

Rodgers was joined by Dan Willis, Keith Barnes and Woodrow Shivers on the team that last year finished second at the same competition. The Court Masters team was made up of Shawn Roundtree, Dwayne Jones, Marvin Childs and Marcellus Walton.

Da Chronic has played in four tournaments representing the SIUE intramural program and have reached the championship game in every one. In the intramural league, their success is unmatched as they've only lost two games in their nearly four years together. Both those losses have come to the Court Masters with one of them being the championship game of the SIUE Schick tournament on Feb. 10.

The team's success is no coincidence. The players know what it takes to be successful.

"We play good together, everybody knows their roles," Rodgers said. "Over the years we've lost some players, but we've been able to find others to fill their roles on the team."

Willis was quick to add, "We know how to win ball games. Defense wins and we make sure we play good defense."

He went on to say that with a great scorer like Rodgers, who played with Shivers on the SIUE Cougar team for two years in the late 80s and early 90s, everybody else can concentrate more on the defensive end.

When asked who their go-to-guy is, both Willis and Barnes quickly respond, "Mo, without a doubt."

"He's the point guard and we want the ball in his hands to make the decisions," Willis continues. "He always makes good decisions."

The Court Masters were formed from Da Chronic in an effort to try and help out the SIUE intramural league a few years back. Roundtree and Shivers split from Da Chronic to form the foundation for the Court Masters. Now, the two of them remain as that foundation, but Shivers still plays with Da Chronic in some tournaments and Roundtree still joins them in some league competition around the area.

Evans chasing record as Lady Cougars enter final week of season

By Brett Licata
Sports Reporter

The SIUE women's basketball team has seen its ups and downs the whole season. With only one senior on the team, the younger players have seen their share of minutes. Head Coach Wendy Hedberg said in her office on Tuesday afternoon that the experience received by the younger players will help them better their record next season.

The Cougars have two remaining games left on their schedule. They host St. Joseph, who are just above them in the conference standings and IUPU-Ft. Wayne, who owns the second best record in the conference.

"We have trouble beating the teams above us," said Hedberg. "I would like to finish the season on a good note and a win against either of those teams will be extremely satisfying. We lost to both teams earlier this season by close margins so I have confidence that we can do it."

A big story for the team this season has been the play of senior guard Terri Evans. She is the team's on court leader and has a chance to set the career scoring record at SIUE. She needs only eight points in the remaining two games to pass the 1,621 points of former All-American Lori Sebastian, who played for the Cougars from 1987-1991.

Evans said Tuesday, "I had an idea of where I was, but I haven't been concentrating on it."

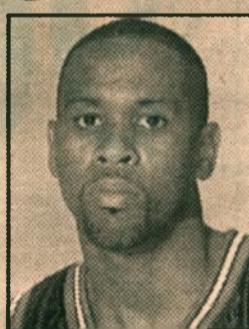

"This (record) speaks a lot of Terri," said Hedberg. "She's capable of scoring, but there are so many more things that she does well. Her free throw percentage and her assists rank among the top on the team."

Hedberg said that she would like to see the women work on their free throw shooting during the off season.

"Free throws are what killed us at times. We lost games by two or three or four points that we could have won."

The Lady Cougars will play at home against St. Joseph on Thursday evening and IUPU-Ft. Wayne on Saturday.

Cougar

Don't blink or you may miss him streaking across the floor. I'm talking, of course, about Shaun Smoot, the Cougars fleet-footed point guard. The self-proclaimed "magician" is making his first appearance in the Cougar Corner for his play against Bellarmine.

Smoot, a transfer student from Natchez, Miss., looks like he is finally becoming comfortable with the Cougar's offense. Even though Shaun is not the focal point of the offense, he put up some impressive numbers last Saturday.

Smoot was 10-12 from the free throw line where he usually only shoots 68 percent. Those ten points along with five field goals gave him twenty points for the evening.

He wasn't done there though. He also padded the stat sheet with five rebounds and nine assists. Coach Margenthaler had this explanation for Smoot's sudden production.

"We stepped up the pace and that benefitted Shaun. They weren't too aggressive on him and he took advantage of that," Margenthaler said.

The point guard isn't expected to put up big numbers in Margenthaler's offense, but is expected to do other little things.

"He's learned the system and slowed down a bit. He doesn't turn the ball over as much as he used to and his free throw shooting has really improved," Margenthaler said.

Congratulations Shaun.

Role Player. This term is often looked down upon, yet every good team needs quality role players to be successful.

This week's member of the Cougar Corner, Cathy Wells, has had the unenviable task of backing up Terri Evans at the point guard position for the Lady Cougars.

"There's a bit of pressure when I come into the game for Terri because I have to be the ball handler. I think my ball handling has gotten better though and I'm making better decisions," Wells said.

Wells sees about eleven minutes of action each game but she makes the most of it by playing a solid, mistake-free game. Wells has wisely used her time on the bench productively. While waiting her turn, she watches Evans and has picked up some things that can help her own game.

"Terri is very quick. She's a good leader and when we need someone to step up, Terri does," Wells said.

Cathy knows her turn will come though and she's eagerly awaiting the challenge.

"We should have a good season next year. It will be tough without Terri, but I'd like to be someone to step in and hopefully fill the role she's had," Wells added.

Congratulations on your first time in the Cougar Corner, Cathy.

Roundcount breaks school record at Knox Invitational

By Todd Spann
Assistant Sports Editor

Led by senior Travis Roundcount's record breaking performance in the 1,500-meter run, The SIUE men's and women's track team traveled to Knox College and put up some strong performances.

Roundcount's time of 3 minutes, 59.1 seconds, not only earned him a first place finish but also broke a school record. The old record stood at 4:1.5, set by Rudy Rocha, a former All-American in the 5,000 meters.

"It was an excellent race," Head Coach Darryl Frerker said. "He took it from the gun and never did let up."

Also performing well for the men in the 1500 were Gus Coronado and Chris Wolf who rounded out the top three positions. Coronado's 4:4.2 second run placed him second and Wolf followed real close behind with a 4:4.6 second run.

"With Gus and Chris competing well, this was a very good intrasquad race," Frerker said.

Wayne Bloemer also finished high in the 1,500 as he placed seventh to give the Cougars four runners in the top ten of that race.

"Wayne is also running real strong. And he also doubled down with the other three runners (Roundcount, Coronado and Wolf) to break a field house record in the four by 800 relay and that was just awesome," Frerker said.

On the women's side, Colleen Casey once again had a solid performance coming off her record breaking run a weekend ago.

In the 1,500, Casey placed third with a time of 4:55.9 seconds. Just four seconds off of breaking another SIUE record.

"She also ran a strong race. She started off fast but just got beat down the stretch," Frerker said. "Last time she broke the record in the 1,000 meter and she wanted to come out and break the school record in the 1,500 meter. And she just missed it."

Other good races were from Kendra Newell who finished third in the 800 meter and Becky Hagenbruch who also finished third in the 400 meter.

Vickey Johnson finished a strong fourth in the 3,000 meter and Jacqi Vazquez came in sixth in the 1,500 meter.

Also the 3,200-meter relay came in third with Johnson, Newell, Casey and Hagenbruch.

"It is good to see the competitiveness out of all the athletes that ran. It is a good indication of the upcoming outdoor season," Frerker said.

Schick from previous page

Although Da Chronic and Court Masters have played each other many times since they divided up and are very competitive on the court, many of the team members are still good friends off the court.

All of the players said that the ultimate goal in Chicago was for an all SIUE final and when the U of I team prevented that from happening by beating Court Masters, it provided extra incentive for Da Chronic to beat them. The extra incentive was needed for them to get through the cramping and weariness and bring home the crown.
