Morris dedication marks Founders' Day

SIU President Ted Sanders and SIUE Chancellor David Werner will join with Dorothy Morris at 11 a.m. today at the Donal Myer Arboretum near University Drive as a tree is dedicated to the memory of Delyte W. Morris, one of SIU's founders.

Dorothy Morris will be coming from her home in North Carolina to attend the Founders Day ceremony and the day's other events. Peter Morris, a son of the SIU founder, will also be on hand.

Morris was a founder of SIU and served as president of the university system from 1948 to 1971.

After the dedication, there will be a reception for SIUE students at 11:30 a.m. in the Goshen Lounge in the Morris University Center.

The center will be formally rededicated in Morris' name at 2 p.m. today.

The ceremony in the center's Meridian Hall will also include the rededication of the William G. Stratton Quadrangle and Founders Hall, which was formerly Classroom Building II. A reception will follow the ceremony and all are invited to attend.

Officials will also honor individuals and organizations that helped establish the Edwardsville campus in the late 1950s. Chief among these will be Morris.

"SIUE wouldn't be here without the vision of Delyte Morris," SIUE Chancellor David Werner said.

Those attending the ceremony will receive free commemorative booklets containing a pictorial history of Morris' years at SIUE from 1957 through 1970. This span includes his tenures at the East St. Louis campus and Shurtleff College in Alton, which later became the dental school.

Last day to vote for Homecoming king and queen

Today is your last chance to vote for the Homecoming king and queen.

Voting is from 7 a.m. until 10 p.m. in the Morris University Center. Students must have a valid SIUE ID to vote. No write-in votes will be counted.

There are 10 king and 10 queen candidates. All candidates have a 2.5 cumulative grade point average and have done at least 25 hours of community service.

The new homecoming king and queen will be announced at the annual Homecoming Coronation. The ceremony begins at 9:30 p.m. Saturday. The coronation is scheduled for 11:30 p.m. and the dance will end at 12:30 a.m.

The homecoming king and queen will have many obligations. They are the host and the hostess for SIUE at many events, including university recruitment efforts.

Some of the other responsibilities are to kick off and participate in the Springfest, serve on next year's king and queen selection committee and crown next year's king and queen.

No, you were not hallucinating. There really was a bright red Humvee outside the University Center Wednesday.

The vehicle was part of the Marine Corps display at the Oktober Career Fest and Volunteer Fair.

Jean Paterson, director of the Career Development Center, said she was pleased with the turnout.

"We've got about 153 employers here today," Paterson said.

"We don't know the exact number of students yet, but I'm going to guess it's close to 1,000."

Paterson said there were more health-care employers than in the past, and a good number of technology companies.

Scott Warren, senior business engineer for Sumaria Systems Inc., an engineering firm, said this is the first time his company has participated in a college career day.

"It's been very good," Warren said. "It's been money well spent to see this volume and quality of people in three to four hours."

Paterson said the October career day is one of two career days the campus offers. The next one, Career Network '99, will be March 17.

Industrious grad student brings a bygone era into the present

'60s throwback Tim Slape

BARBARA DUMOULIN
NEWS STRINGER

His ponytail, goatee and sandals are reminiscent of days gone by. A soft-spoken voice and easy-going demeanor make it appear as if Tim Slape, a mass communications graduate student missed his generation.

"He's a throwback to the '60s," said Tom Dehner, news director at WSIE radio station. Slape is a news reporter and announcer at the station. "To a casual observer, it may appear that Tim is indifferent, but he is not," Dehner said. "He is industrious. He is very involved."

Any resemblance to a flower child ends with Slape's appearance and his politics. His full schedule and lofty goals would make a hippie stroll for cover.

Slape pays the cost of his graduate studies by working three jobs: the job at WSIE; as a lab technician in the mass comm department, and at a bicycle shop in Edwardsville.

In traditional '60s-style protest, Slape rails against forced parking permits. He parks his truck at the SIUE soccer field and rides his bike the rest of the way to the campus.

"Either you pay their fine or pay their sticker fee," Slape said. "There should be some free parking available somewhere."

Slape comes to the graduate program at SIUE after earning his bachelor's degree in mass communications at Milliken University in Decatur, Ill.

Dehner feels that Slape's personality complements the crew in the news room. "Tim is a nice addition to our news staff.

We have multiple personalities and styles. Tim brings something unique to the staff, and as an advanced student, he is able to help some of the younger students here."

Slape plans to complete his graduate studies and go on to receive his doctorate. He would like to become a communications professor at a small college, where he can be intimately involved with students.

Dehner's opinion of Slape's future looks a little different. "He's a sleeper," Dehner said. "I wouldn't be at all surprised if someday he's in an upper management position with pin-stripes and a power tie at a broadcasting outlet."

Slape laughs at this assessment. "I don't see that happening - unless I go bald," Slape said. "Bald would go better with a pin-striped suit."

One thing is certain, ponytail or pin-stripes, Slape won't be laid back, zoned out or sittin' in.

Now's time to submit MLK scholarship and humanitarian award nominations

BY DAMEENA COX
NEWS STRINGER

SIUE is once again offering the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Scholarship and Humanitarian Student Award. Each year a student is awarded this scholarship, but not just any student. The recipient of this award must follow King's teachings, principles and philosophical beliefs.

The selection committee chooses the winner. Committee members seek individuals with outstanding accomplishments in areas of academic achievement, leadership and service. This award, along with many others, will be presented at King's birthday celebration Jan. 21 in the Meridian Ballroom. The celebration will include a luncheon, guest speakers and entertainment.

"I think it's a wonderful opportunity for students to take advantage of scholarship programs," said Steve Sperotto, director of the Kimmel Leadership Center. His advice for applicants is to be as detailed as possible and examples of leadership should be well-documented in a personal resume.

The deadline for applications is Nov. 2. If you have questions regarding the application process contact Steve Sperotto at 650-2686.

Bill Gates donates to St. Louis Public Library

ST. LOUIS (AP) - For 10-year-old Alex Daugherty, computers are better than Nintendos.

"You can do research, you can play games, you can play on the Internet," Daugherty said Tuesday as he played the Magic School Bus game on a computer at the Julia Davis branch of the St. Louis Public Library in north St. Louis.

That's good news for Microsoft Corp. founder Bill Gates, who also was at the library Tuesday to dedicate a computer center that his Gates Library Foundation helped finance.

The foundation gave the St. Louis Public Library System $175,000 for its computer program. The libraries will use that money to install 58 computers, including the 17 that have been hooked up at the Julia Davis Branch Library.

Over a span of five years, the foundation plans to spend $200 million to bring new computers and the Internet to public libraries nationwide. Microsoft also is donating $200 million worth of software to the project.

Already, 1,000 public libraries have been awarded grants.

"The success has been really gratifying," Gates told about 70 students and teachers.

Letter to the Editor

You've come a long way

The ad said, "You've come a long way, baby." It meant women. The ad was superficial, but it was correct.

Women have come a long way because of the bullish determination of pioneers who dragged their sisters out of the Stone Age.

Society put the weaker sex in its place. Women had few legal rights. Some were forced into arranged, repugnant marriages, and some married for survival and suffered abuse.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton called a meeting of the first Women's Rights Convention in 1848 at her home in Seneca Falls, N.Y. She published the Declaration of Sentiments, which stated, "We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men and women are created equal."

In 1861, Stanton pleaded unsuccessfully before the New York Senate to make willful desertion and cruelty grounds for divorce. It became New York law in 1966.

Education was not universal; therefore, poor women had little hope for a future beyond domestic service, or the pitiful rewards for a seamstress.

However, in 1849 Elizabeth Blackball graduated head of her class and became the first woman in the United States to receive a medical degree. She had applied to 29 schools before admission to Geneva College in New York. She had to fight to attend anatomy classes.

Mary Edward Walker became the first female surgeon in the U.S. Army in 1865. She was a confederate prisoner and was later awarded the Medal of Honor.

Women could not vote until the 19th Amendment was ratified in August 1920. But in 1872 Susan B. Anthony led a march to Rochester's city hall to demand she be registered to vote. She defied the law by casting a ballot in a New York election.

Dorothea Dix took charge of a women's Sunday school class at a Boston prison in 1841. Horrified by the miserable conditions, she dedicated her life to social reform. Dix was appointed superintendent of women nurses serving the American Red Cross in 1881.

Clara Barton founded the American Red Cross in 1881.

Fannie Farmer published the first edition of her "Boston Cooking School Cook Book" in 1896. And Margaret Sanger opened the first birth control clinic in 1916 in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Two women were inaugurated governor of their states in 1925. The first women to be elected to the office were Nellie Tyler Ross in Wyoming and Miriam "Ma" Ferguson in Texas.

Women have come a long way. These are but a sample of the foremothers who lit the torch and carried it.

Alcohol rights and responsibility

There have been different slogans over the years ... "Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk," "Know When to Say When," "If You Choose to Drink, Drink Responsibly" ... but the message of the Alcohol Awareness Week has always been the same — the choice to drink is yours; choose wisely.

I don't intend to get into a debate about underage drinking here. There is no one out there who doesn't know that it is not legal to purchase or consume alcohol if you are under 21 years of age. Those living in Woodland and Prairie Halls know that according to University Housing policy no alcohol is allowed in those buildings. As I said earlier, what I am talking about here is choice. Just as you must realize that if you choose to break a law or housing policy you must pay the consequences, so you should realize that if you choose to drink, you must deal with those consequences.

If you choose to drink, think about the other choices you make beforehand. Make responsible choices. Choose a designated driver. Choose not to drink so much you lose your judgment. Choose to monitor your own drinks so no one can slip a drug in one of them. Choose not to endanger your life by consuming enough alcohol to poison yourself. Choose not to drink when it might interfere with your classes or class work. Never let alcohol make your choices for you.

October 19-23 is National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week. Many informative and fun events are planned, culminating with Tons of Fun IX, from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., Friday, Oct. 23 in the Student Fitness Center. Have fun at these events and take some time to think about drinking and the choices you make.

Regurgitating education

I was sitting in class just the other day taking a midterm when the big question popped up in my head.

Why?

The world of academia and I have always been involved in this war of love and hate. I love to learn; I hate midterms. There was once a time when you could have walked up to a charming little 8-year-old Danielle Belton and she would have told you she liked tests. She could give you two reasons:

#1 She always got an A.

#2 It showed she really was smarter than everyone else in her class.

Ah, I was so young and full of myself back then.

But somewhere along my academic trail I lost my photographic memory and sponge-like mind. Although I am still just as eager to learn, I have grown to dislike midterms. This is not because they force me to study but because they never represent what I have actually learned.

I had four tests last semester in critical thinking. I got a C in the class. I remember nothing. I took Writing for the Media my freshman year, got a B and was a horrible writer. I have had several classes that I can't even remember what they were about. And I fear that what I studied this week for midterms, I won't even recall next week.

Absolutely nothing is working its way into the long-term memory. All this midterm madness and studying for what? My mind will be a total blank once I'm done filling in the dots on the Scantron sheet. And it's this way for many students.

For many classes such as math, science and theory courses, testing is necessary. There's no way you're going to get around understanding two plus two without practicing and testing. But in many classes students aren't learning and understanding what is being taught. They are merely regurgitating what the instructors are feeding them. Often there is no real independent thinking or learning, just classrooms filled with yes men and yes women and inane ramblings. I thirst for classes where open discussion is welcome, hands-on experience is available and grades are based on a student's comprehension, not how eloquently a student can rephrase an instructor's spewing. Believe me, I know. I've eloquently rephrased many a professor's spewing all the way to an A, but did I ever really learn? Where did the professor's thoughts end and my thoughts begin?

In many classes students learn one skill. And it is a skill they will use for the rest of their lives. It is the skill of survival. Knowing just enough to not look stupid, learning just enough to get through the day and learning how to take whatever the boss gives you and give it back to him or her the way it's wanted. In college, it seems, is a time when we are yes men in training. Learning to take the boss' B.S. and serve it back up to him the way he likes it. I really want to learn, I really want to understand, but where is that learning and understanding when all I'm required to do to pass a class is to serve the B.S. back to the boss?

Where does the kowtowing and canting end and the learning begin? Just because I could bluff some good Spanish didn't mean I knew what I was saying. When I got A's in high school that didn't mean I always understood the subjects. I would just memorize the facts for as long as I needed to know them, then empty out the old to make room for the new. There will never be creative, thought-provoking students unless educators start poking and provoking those minds. The prodding should start at the very beginning.

My friends would always tell me that I had it easy because the teachers liked me. But the only thing that separates me from my friends is that a long time ago someone poked and provoked me — that and I'm a real good B.S. regurgitator.

Why aren't we graded for what we understand rather than what we regurgitate? Maybe it's harder to measure, but the rewards would be far greater. I would have enjoyed having a real Writing for the Media professor who would have taught me how to write. Unfortunately I had to wait until I got to the Alestle to learn.

World population perspective is offered by SIUE professor

BY STEPHEN WHITE
NEWS STRINGER

If everyone in the world stood naked, their bodies smashed together inside a giant glass container one mile wide and one mile high, the entire world population could be fitted on the campus of SIUE.

Interesting stuff, no doubt. These are the types of facts that sociologists love. Especially SIUE sociology professor Bob Blain, the man in charge of maintaining the "World Population" display on the first floor of Peck Hall.

Consider another intriguing fact: there are roughly 6 billion people on the planet Earth. Out of those, fewer than 300 million are American, yet Americans consume and produce more waste than the citizens of all other countries combined.

The World Population display at SIUE is a reminder of just how small we are, and, Blain said, a reminder of the responsibility we have to make the world a better place.

"What the world needs to learn to do is reduce its numbers, but more importantly is to reduce our consumption," Blain said. "Because if the people in the Third World tried to consume at the level of the United States, we would destroy the Earth — we'd consume all its life-giving capacities, kill all the animals and we'd be dead too."

Turn over a new leaf, turn in a book to help underprivileged children

BY DAMEENA COX
NEWS STRINGER

Many of us had favorite books when we were kids. But imagine not having those books, or any books.

Now imagine making books available for kids who don't have them. You can help put books in the homes of children in Southern Illinois and the Metro East area. The SIU Head Start and Child Development program is sponsoring the campaign for "A Children's Book in Every Head Start Home." Head Start is a program that meets the social, intellectual, emotional and physical needs of preschool children in low-income families.

Beverly Sanders, wife of SIU President Ted Sanders, is spearheading the program. During the first three years of the project more than 11,000 books were distributed to the homes of children enrolled in the program. The goal for this year is 3,000.

Special containers for donations will be available through Nov. 25. They can be found in libraries, offices, student centers, lobbies and residence halls on SIU campuses.

In support of the campaign, the Friends of Lovejoy Library will exchange a book in the Friends' Good Buy Bookshop for every children's book donated through Nov. 19. In choosing books, please consider that they are for children ages 2 to 6.

This year books will also be donated to the Early Childhood Development Center. "It just shows how much the campus does care," Suzanne Kutterer-Siburt, assistant director of Kimmel Leadership Center, said.

For more information, call SIU in Carbondale at 453-5714 or in East St. Louis at 482-6947 or e-mail skutter@siue.edu.

Kicking back.

FOR THE ALESTLE

Kyle Anderson, a second-year political science student at SIUE, is managing not one, but two democratic candidates.

The candidates are Rep. Jay Hoffman, D-Collinsville, and Democrat Bob Daiber, a Marine resident who was unsuccessful in his first two tries for state representative.

Anderson carries 15 credit hours, and still finds time to coordinate the campaigns of two conservative candidates.

He said the one thing he doesn't have time for is sleep.

"Jay Hoffman's campaign is easier because he already holds that office," Anderson said. "But Bob Daiber, a third-time runner from the 110th district — his campaign takes more effort."

Anderson explained his role as field coordinator. He organizes the candidates' neighborhood walks. He knows which neighborhoods to walk because of a database containing information on democratic voters.

Anderson orchestrates phone banks for candidates. He meets with labor officials and people from the American Association of Retired People organization for endorsements.

"The mark of a good coordinator is making sure the candidate is never in the office, but out where the people are," Anderson said. "(Daiber) needs 2500 votes. He needs volunteers for the phone banks, literature walks, and posting campaign signs on front yards." Anyone interested in volunteering can call 887-9662.

Anderson recently set up a press conference for Daiber in Edwardsville. Daiber said, "I'm not walking today." He usually goes door to door finding out what the people in this area care about.

He introduces himself as a man who cares and he tells them he wants to help.

Size doesn't matter, but your health does

BY DANA MILES
NEWS STRINGER

Don't sweat if a size 6 doesn't fit. Try your own size instead.

Health experts will tell you that the present American/European ideal body shape is a combination of slenderness and athleticism and that the media exploits this image by bombarding men and women with the messages that they have to have this ideal body to be happy and attractive.

Research has shown that by age 18, 80 percent of females are or have been actively dieting.

"Diets don't work, never have, never will. Dieting can cause future weight problems," said Tammy Cook, an instructor for Transforming Eating Obsessions, a program offered at SIUE.

Unhealthy dieting can lead to eating disorders such as anorexia, bulimia nervosa and binge eating disorder. An eating disorder is a collection of interrelated eating habits. Often these habits are weight management practices, attitudes about food, weight and body shape and physiological imbalances that become disordered, Cook said.

Any individual, male or female from any social and economic background, can develop an eating disorder.

Research shows that there are psychological and personality factors that influence the development of eating disorders.

ANDERSON

Daiber said he earned his doctorate at SIUE. He said his slogan, "New Leadership for Working Families," includes Health Maintenance Organization reform, property tax reform and safer schools for quality education.

Anderson said, "I gained administrative and general experience in a successful campaign for state Rep. Steve

Some of these are: high need for achievement, significant adolescent turmoil, impaired self-concept, struggle with identity formation, mood instability, low self-esteem and an inability to adapt to changes during adolescence.

Each of these factors may vary from individual to individual.

However, if you are struggling with your weight, there is a way to properly lose it without harming your body.

Losing weight can be achieved by: eating healthfully and within moderation. Dieters should make sure they eat a variety of foods, but never overindulge.

Exercising is also very important. Cook said. Choose physical activities that you enjoy. Be disciplined, but not negative. People should get on a regular schedule and stick to it, without being extra hard on themselves.

"Nothing will change without effort and energy," said Ruth Cohen Kubicek, an instructor from the program.

"Start healthy habits now, so that it does not catch up with you later," said a student in the program.

"I was a grunt," he said. "I did the busy work."

"I eventually hope to be a political consultant who travels all over the country helping with campaigns," Anderson said. "Finally, I plan on running for city councilman."

Holy Halloween! What a pumpkin

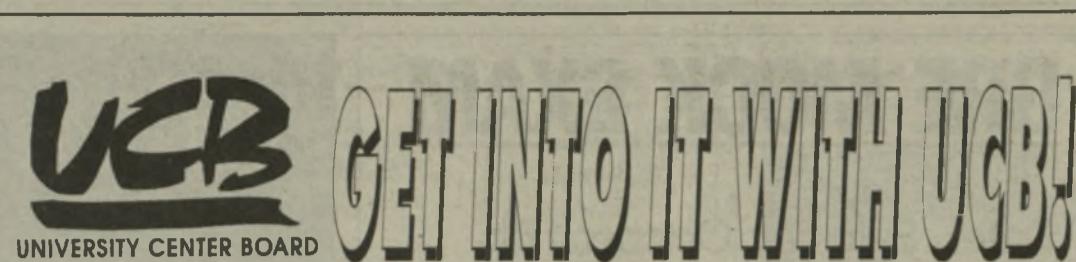

HALF MOON BAY, Calif. (AP) — Linus was right after all: There is a Great Pumpkin.

Lincoln Mettler of Eatonville, Wash., said all it took was a small patch of earth, a little patience and a lot of fertilizer to turn one of his tiny pumpkin seeds into a 974-pound behemoth.

Mettler's pumpkin took top honors Monday in the 25th annual Half Moon Bay Great Pumpkin Weigh-Off, 20 miles south of San Francisco.

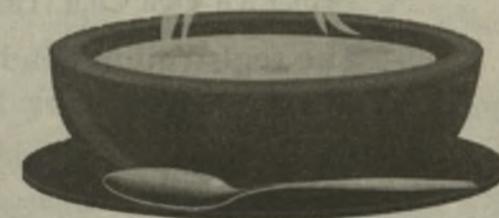

Mettler's winning entry was an Atlantic Giant that measured 2 feet 9 inches high and 13 feet 7 inches in circumference. His pumpkin bested the previous contest record by about 100 pounds.

The winning pumpkin earned Mettler a $4,870 first-place prize. The aerospace worker and part-time farmer said he would put the proceeds from his winnings back into his small crop of six pumpkin patches.

Toilet paper vandals vs. free tickets

We've got free tickets to Darkness Haunted Theme Park, Silo X and Terror Visions 3-D.

BY SHERI MCWHIRTER
LIFESTYLES EDITOR

Now that the leaves are changing and the air has become just a little brisk, the season is right for the holiday of freaks: Halloween. While the malls put up their Christmas trees and roll out the holiday sales, let's not forget the ghoulish time that leads to All Hallow's Eve.

As children of the night prowl through the 'burbs tossing miles of toilet tissue into their neighbors' trees, what are civilized college students to do? Join the ranks of the toilet paper vandals? Why not? That is, if you can afford to buy the supplies. If you can't, the Alestle has a solution: haunted theme parks.

Now you're thinking, "How the hell can I afford haunted theme parks if I can't afford toilet paper?" Well, the Alestle has free tickets to the Darkness Haunted Theme Park, Silo X and Terror Visions 3-D. Now don't get overly excited. You can't just collect these tickets without some type of retribution.

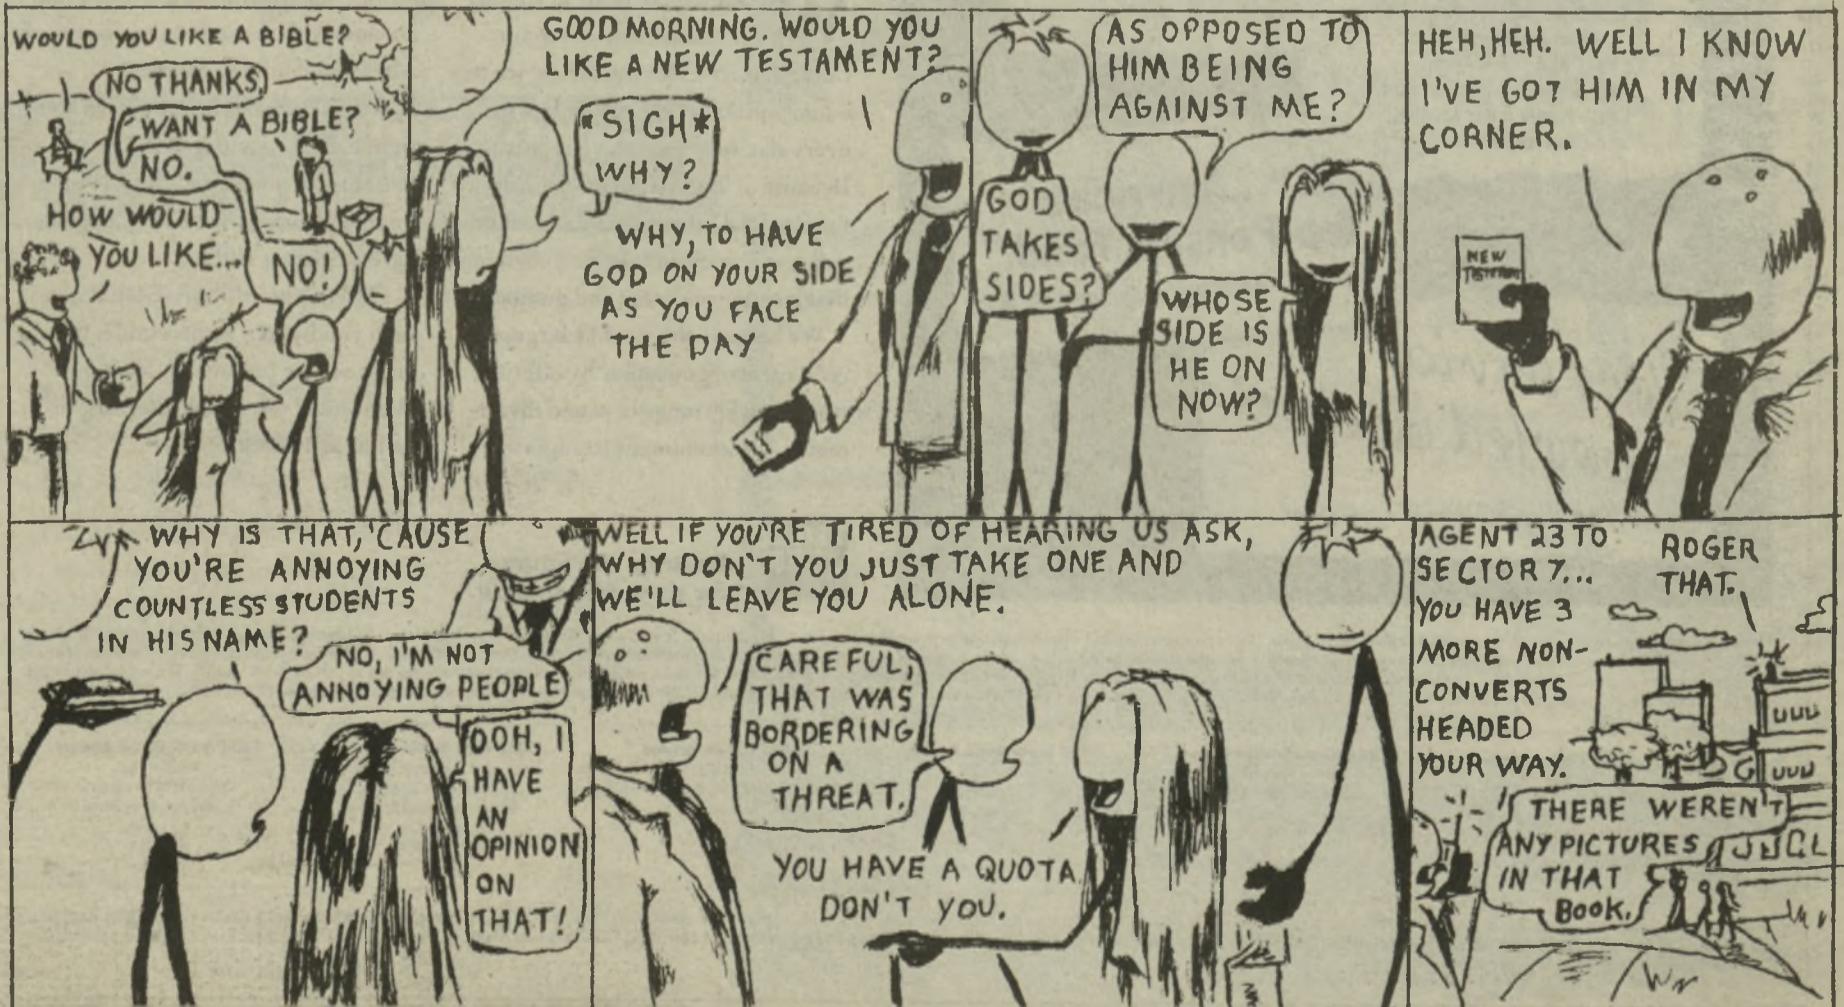

We've got an interesting payment plan. Show up at the Alestle office at 12:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 21 in full costume. That's right, full costume! Come as anything you like (other than yourself) and whoever thrills, chills or charms us the most will win two free tickets to either the Darkness Haunted Theme Park, Silo X or Terror Visions 3-D. Good luck and happy haunting!

For more information call the Alestle office at 650-3528.

Caught up again?

I am claiming my chair in front of the television for the next episode of "ER".

BARBARA DUMOULIN
LIFESTYLE STRINGER

I have to admit at the start that I have never been one to watch reruns of television shows. But when I was enticed by Turner Network Television to "get caught up again" in "ER," I had to see if that would really happen to me. TNT aired the 2-hour pilot episode last week to kick off its prime time broadcasts of the "ER" series reruns.

"ER" is a fast-paced hospital drama written by Michael Crichton that began airing in 1994. The series was a big hit when it burst on the scene and has won numerous Emmy Awards in its four years. "ER" takes place in the emergency room of a Chicago hospital, but unlike medical shows of the "Marcus Welby, M.D." variety, this show focuses on the medical personnel and not the patients.

The show often has too much bustle to accurately portray a real-life hospital and harbors a soap opera-like quality to the personal problems some of the characters encounter. But it does provide us enough realistic grist to make it much better viewing than many other prime time dramas.

The pilot show introduces us to the characters and establishes the atmosphere of timelessness and sleeplessness in which the characters operate. Anthony Edwards plays the chief resident and in the opening episode he is constantly being awakened from sleep. Other references to the passage of time such as "When did it start snowing outside?" and "When did it start raining outside?" are used to transmit their cocoon-like setting.

Although the characters are somewhat predictable and, of course, all great-looking, they

RAANTS & RAVES

BY COREY STULCE
WRITER AT LARGE

It's time to get back to the topic that's always on everyone's mind, even if they don't want to admit it. That's right, baby. I'm talking about porn.

Sure, porn. It's a billion-dollar industry in this country and although there are probably 12 really creepy, sweaty guys that smell like leather and salami who account for about $750,000,000 of that cool billion, that still leaves $250,000,000 that us so-called normal people spend on porn every single year.

Now myself, I probably only blow about $10 or so out of my wad on porn a year. I prefer to let my porn-lovin' friends get the rest. Whether you believe it or not, porn gets pretty boring to me after about 20 minutes or so. For some of my friends, it's a lifestyle that never ends.

I've got one friend who would never leave his room if he had a pee bucket and an endless supply of Yoo Hoo, Cheetos and Kleenex. He's got the porn vibe that bad.

I guess there are a few things that bother or confuse me about the whole porno film experience.

The first is the quality of the films themselves. I can get past the horrible acting. There's plenty of that in mainstream Hollywood features. I just can't stand the production values. The creepy camcorder feel of the whole thing makes me feel like this could have been done in my basement with my sister and her friends. How is that supposed to get me excited?

Why can't they throw a few bucks into the mix? Get some decent costumes and lighting, film on location and maybe have some fun cameo appearances like Abe Vigoda or Charlotte Rae of "Facts of Life" fame. They could use the work and would be damn glad to get the chance to appear in "film" once again.

Another thing that confuses me is the whole ratings system. You've got the X, the XX and the XXX. What's the difference? It's not really explained anywhere that I've seen. Do they argue like the MPAA does with real filmmakers? "OK, take out that last 'money shot' and we'll give you a XX. Otherwise it's XXX city for your flick."

I also don't get the idea of porn sequels. Are there a lot of loose ends to tie up at the end of one of these? Did we need "Flaccid Daddies 2" or "Sgt.

Slutty's Probe Busters 7"? And what I notice is that it's not even the same cast as was in the original. What a tease.

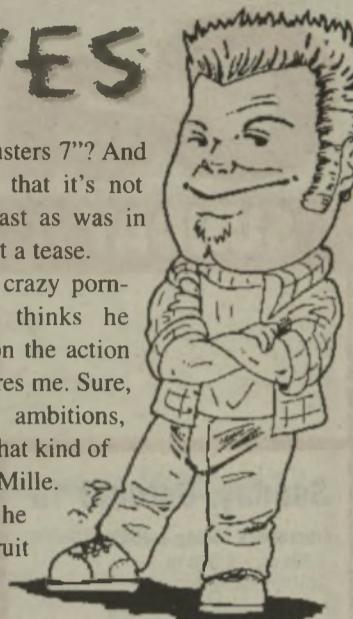

So now my crazy porn-addicted friend thinks he wants to get in on the action himself. This scares me. Sure, I have directing ambitions, but I don't want that kind of close-up, Mr. DeMille. And of course he wants me to recruit people for his epics. Why did he ask me? Sure, I know quite a few people but I'm not Larry Flynt or Steve Rubell. How would some of my acquaintances react to my asking, "Hey, you wanna make a porno?" As well as I know some of these people, I'd get a mickey in my drink and end up in the basement of Zed's waiting to meet the "Gimp."

But he has big ambitions, my sick friend. At least he's going in the right direction. He wants to make movie-parody pornos, which I think are the funniest. And he does have a couple of amusing ideas. His first would be a little flick called "Saving Ryan's Privates," starring Tom Yanks. I laughed, anyway.

So I decided to help him out. Earlier this week, I took him to meet a pal of mine who was in town. You might know him; the infamous king of porn, Ron Jeremy. Ron's a great guy. I mean, I gotta love the guy. The first thing he said when he saw me was, "Hey, you've lost some weight." And coming from the Hedgehog, that's a compliment.

So, my buddy asked Ron what it takes to get a script produced in the industry, and Ron was straight with him. He said it wasn't going to happen. The power porn players are smart enough to avoid unsolicited scripts so they can keep their privates from getting stomped in a lawsuit. He told my buddy his best bet was getting someone to finance his flick and making it himself.

I get the feeling now that he'll be expecting me to start raising money for "Ryan's Privates" for him. I'm a good friend so I can't say no. Possibly in the next year, look for a big porn flick from Producer Corey coming to a theater near you.

Ask Alli Khat

Alli Khat is not a licensed therapist, and her advice should only be taken seriously if you are very desperate or make numerous phone calls to psychic hot lines.

Dear Alli Khat,

My boyfriend got a hickey from another girl. He says he was asleep when he got it. Should I believe him?

-This Sucks

Dear This Sucks,

I'm sure your boyfriend was asleep when he got the hickey ... but don't you wonder what made him so tired?

Dear Alli Khat,

I scheduled dates with two girls on the same night. I want to date them both but I'm not sure that's such a good idea. What do I do? -Double Trouble

Dear Double Trouble,

Decide which girl you like better or which one is more attractive and take the other girl out to a scary show. Then drop her off and take the prettier girl — if you know what I mean.

Say What!?

What do you like best about new Chick-fil-A?

"I like the chicken, but I don't like the prices."

-Rick Box, Junior, Biology

"It's something different. I love it. It's one of my favorite mall foods."
-Tina Auten, Junior, Anthropology/Psychology

are complex. We can either identify with them or we know someone just like them. The show introduces us to many of the personal issues these characters will face and deal with in the coming episodes.

There is friction between Anthony Edwards' character and his wife as he is torn between taking the stable, high-paying job at a doctor's office his wife wants him to take and staying on as chief resident in a draining, low-paying job that he believes makes a difference.

George Clooney plays the bad boy pediatrician who has problems with booze and women but enough charm to get out of most of his troubles. He cares deeply about the children he treats.

Eriq LaSalle plays the aggressive, overachieving renegade surgeon, with skillful hands and an abrasive personality. It is obvious from the start that he will be butting heads with just about everyone he encounters on both a personal and professional level.

Noah Wyle, playing an intern, is the new kid on the block trying to get through his first day without having anyone, the patients he treats especially, soul — too sensitive, in fact, since she attempts to commit suicide in this episode.

The characters move easily between humor and drama and that is one of the best features of the show. The dialogue has a natural, realistic feel to it. In one exchange between Edwards and Wyle, Edwards as senior staffer is giving Wyle some advice to help cure first day jitters. "Don't ever say you're sorry [for how you feel]," Edwards said. "Helping them is more important than how we feel. But it's still a pain in the ass sometimes."

Social issues are addressed in this episode both in the context of the plot and the casting in the show. Teen pregnancy; child abuse; poor people with no medical insurance who are denied a full range of treatment; loneliness experienced by older, isolated patients and an injured patient trying to get workman's compensation to cover an injury he sustained at home are just some of the issues encountered.

Hierarchy of staff is another issue that is addressed. The overworked and underpaid staff realize how little he knows. Sherry Stringfield plays the role of the consummately professional resident who has no personal life because of the hours she dedicates to the job.

Julianna Margulies, playing the ER's chief nurse, is a sensitive in the emergency room is expected to make life-and-death calls and then get up the next day and do the same thing. Meanwhile, staff bosses make the big bucks and are able to have a real life. When LaSalle is unable to find the staff boss quickly enough to mend a life-threatening aneurysm, he breaks hospital policy by attempting the procedure on his own. William Macy, the higher-up who had to leave a society party to get there, comes in at the end of the procedure only to take the credit for saving the patient's life.

We see a certain irony when Clooney, recovering from his all-night binge, dresses down a mother for her abusive behavior toward her child. His moral stance is admirable but one can't help thinking, "I wonder if he's still drunk?"

While there are several women and one black man cast in positions of authority or responsibility, women and blacks are mostly relegated to lower-level staff positions and white males are in charge. It may be a realistic representation of life but one has to ask if it serves to further stereotype the situation.

The innovative technical aspects of the show — the number of cameras and unusual perspectives used — and the pace of the editing all add to the look and feel of the show. These along with the human frailties of the characters, the snappy dialogue and the real-life issues dealt with have made "ER" both a ratings and critical success.

After watching this show again, it's easy to understand why TNT used the slogan they did to promote "ER" reruns. It is an interesting view of the social and political structure of one of our most needed institutions. "ER" gives us some insight into the complexity of the medical field and the people who operate within its confines. It also makes us wonder if there is a better way to prepare fledgling doctors, nurses and orderlies for their fields rather than just throwing them into sink or swim situations.

The show accomplishes all this and is entertaining at the same time. I am claiming my chair in front of the television for the next episode of "ER."

News from the foul line

By Todd Spann

Hello

Students who complain about not having a football game to attend for our Homecoming should think about supporting the teams we do have and then, maybe then, the school could build a case for starting a football team.

If SIUE sports cannot inspire any more support than the Atlanta Braves during the 1980s why would you bring in a football program?

NBA

For the first time in 51-years the NBA will miss the first two weeks of the season due to labor disagreements.

Commissioner David Stern's announcement will cost teams a lot of cash.

The average team grosses about $500,000 a game. There are 99 games during the two-week span, Nov. 3-16, which means the owners will lose around $50 million.

The players who are paid based on a 82-game season will lose about 8 percent of their paycheck.

Those unlucky players who make a cool $2 million a year might just have to cut back on Christmas gifts.

Because dad will only rake in $1.8 million, sorry little Timmy, you're not getting the real firetruck this year.

Volleyball

This Friday, the Cougar volleyball team will be at home facing St. Joseph's College.

Game time will be 7 p.m. They have won a NCAA Division II leading, 20 games. Let's help them w 21.

Correction

It was reported in Tuesday's paper the volleyball team won 20 games for the first time in their 4-year history.

Two years ago the team recorded 23 victories.

COLLEEN CASEY

SIUE administrator travels to Japan for marathon

BY JAMIE HOPPER
SPORTS WRITER

Running long distances is what Colleen Casey likes to do, but there is no question that going to Niigata City, Japan, is the farthest Casey has gone to compete.

Casey, an assistant coordinator for admissions at Southern Illinois University Edwardsville left Wednesday for Japan, to compete in the 7th Annual Japan Sea Rim Ekiden run. She boarded a plane out of Springfield, Illinois, and headed to Niigata City, Japan.

Casey is a member of one of the two teams traveling to central Japan. The twenty-six kilometer race is to take place at noon on Sunday, Oct. 18.

"The state of Illinois is a sister state to the prefecture of Niigata," said Casey. "So each year, the city of Springfield is invited to send a team of four men and three women to compete in the race." The other American team joining the Springfield team on Sunday is from Galveston, Texas. Galveston is the official sister city of Niigata City.

Homecoming will showcase top two teams in region

BY BRETT LICATA
SPORTS WRITER

Saturday's Homecoming game will showcase the two best teams in the region when the SIUE women's soccer team tries to take over first place in the conference with a win over the University of Southern Indiana.

Both teams are undefeated in the conference. They are one-two in the regional, and both have national rankings. All the signs point to a first-class war at Bob Guelker Field Saturday.

"They're a physical team. Probably the biggest team, in terms of size, that we'll play this season," head coach Brian Korbesmeyer said about Southern Indiana. "We have to neutralize their size with our speed."

The Cougars will have to contend with a pair of the Great Lakes Valley Conference's premier scorers. Megan Russell and Jessica Pigman are both among the top 10 in the conference in scoring with 25 and 15 points respectively.

Sunday will be a battle that pits traditional conference rivals head to head when the Cougars travel to Quincy.

While Quincy has a record under .500, Korbesmeyer said his squad can't underestimate this excellent defensive team.

"They always play us tough and we always play them tough," Korbesmeyer said. "It's not easy playing on their home field. We have to be focused because we know they'll be up for this game."

Homecoming without helmets — Andy Korbesmeyer

Each fall when I return to campus there are two complaints I can count on hearing from the students here. One is that WSIE should not be a jazz station and the other is that SIUE does not have a football team. Since this is a sports feature I'll deal with the latter.

I understand that a lot of you come from high school at had strong football programs. Going to the Friday night football game was the thing to do. I enjoy watching college football as much as anybody and would be a fan if we had a team. But this isn't high school anymore. We are at a university which has to, at times, be run like a business. Here are some reasons why we won't have a football team anytime soon.

1. A publication called the NCAA News reports that the average Division II athletic deficit without institutional support is $773,000 at schools without football and the deficit climbs to $947,000 at schools with football. Losing that kind of money would put a big strain on other programs around here. It costs a lot to run a football program and the attendance at the D-II level isn't high enough to offset the cost.

2. Students don't support the successful programs we have now. Why would they support a football team that would get hammered in its first few years.

3. Even if students do show up, they get in free. So SIUE would have to compete with the St. Louis Cardinals, Rams, Blues, theater and other events for the local entertainment dollar.

4. A football game tears up the field and should not be played on the same field as soccer. Even if football was played at our stadium, there aren't enough locker or shower facilities down at the field to accommodate two teams of eighty people. So teams would have to bus back and forth from the field to the VC. This is inconvenient for players, and would put out people who want to use the VC showers and don't care about football.

So what do we do? It's Homecoming weekend and there is no football. Let me suggest that the parking lot under the trees next to the soccer field is a good place to tailgate. There will be two games on Saturday and that should give you enough time to fire up the grill and start the merriment. While you're at the men's soccer game look for Matt Little. He was an All-American last year and will run over anyone in his path to the goal.

At the women's game check out Janece Friederich. She was already the career leading scorer last year as a junior and has 11 goals so far this season. I suggest you start the weekend early and before you head out on the town Friday night check out the volleyball team that is 20-3 on the season. I don't have to tell you to look for Lindsay Rust because you can't miss her. She leads the team in kills and digs per game. My sermon is now over.

Quick Hits:

Events I would pay to see:

1. A 50-yard dash between Tony Gwynn and David Wells.
2. An open forum on dedication. Keynote speakers: Cal Ripken Jr. and Kerry Collins.
3. A staring contest between Ken Caminiti and Dave Stewart.

A strong defensive effort helped the Cougars down two Missouri teams last week.

The University of Missouri-Rolla was no match for SIUE Wednesday evening.

Senior Janece Friederich started the scoring at the 15:31 mark on a pass from Megan Steward.

Thirty seconds into the second half, Andrea Addotta scored her second goal of the year from Kristi Stedman to put the Cougars in the driver's seat with a 2-0 lead.

By the time SIUE had scored a pair of goals, Missouri-Rolla had a total of two shots on goalkeeper Shannon Roth.

Megan Beagles closed the door on Missouri-Rolla in the 65th minute when she found the back of the net to give her three goals on the season.

The Cougars more than tripled Missouri-Rolla's shot total in the 3-0 victory.

Friederich scored twice for SIUE when it faced the University of Missouri-St. Louis on Saturday.

Less than 10 minutes into the game, Friederich scored her 10th goal of the season on UMSL goalkeeper Samantha Grashoff to put the Cougars on the board.

Karin Tighe made it 2-0 at the 35:22 mark when she netted her second goal of the year.

UMSL threatened with a goal in the 51st minute, but Friederich tallied her second of the game at the 77:56 mark to take her team to 7-1-1 overall and 5-0-1 in the conference with a 3-1 win.
